WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA

 Moderately Strong, Gusty Northerly Winds /Low Relative Humidity (RH) Friday into Saturday

A few light showers are still possible this morning along the California/Nevada border in wake of a weather system moving eastward. High pressure out over the Pacific will strengthen the next few days as a low moves into the Great Basin to increase winds. Moderately strong, gusty northerly/downslope winds will begin later Thursday, stronger Friday and lasting into Saturday morning. Wind gusts on Friday/early Saturday will be 35-40 mph, with favored areas being the western Sierra slopes westward. Minimum RH will be 10-20% Friday-Sunday. Afternoon highs will generally be about 5 degrees above normal for the next 7 days.

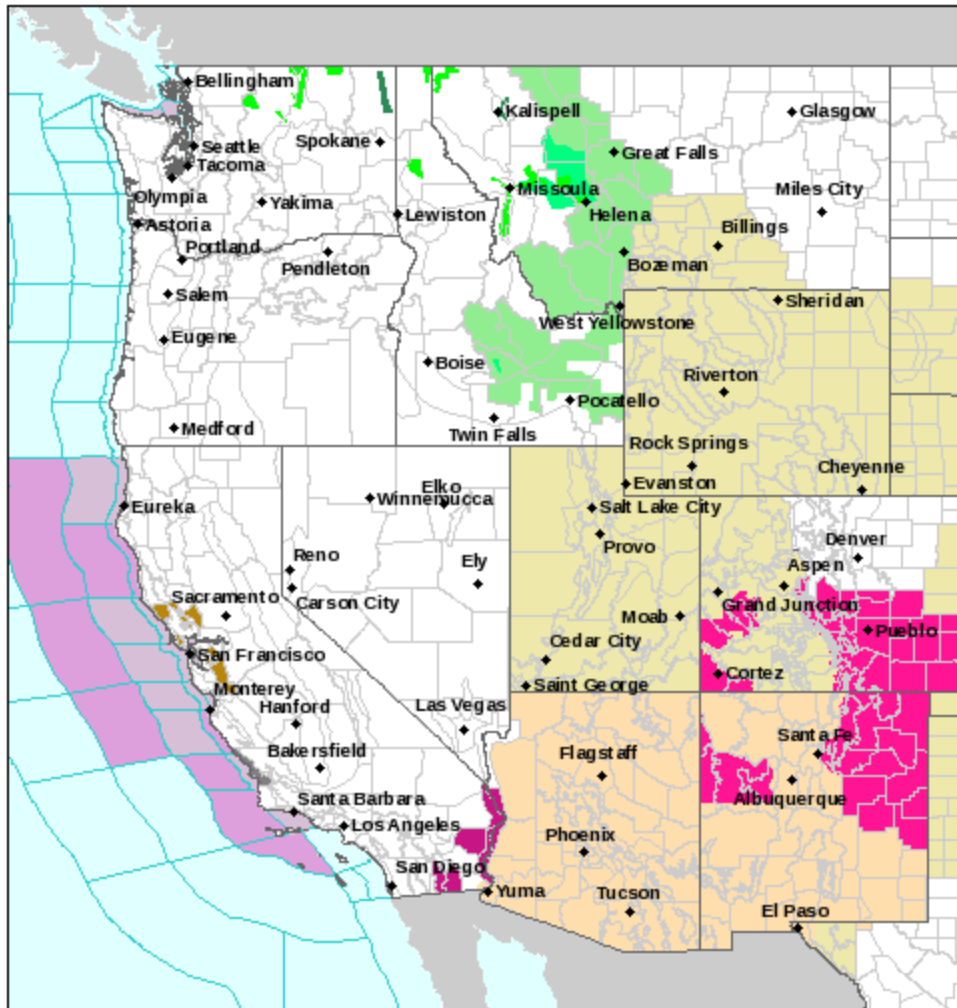

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

Strong westerly afternoon and evening winds through the desert passes through Friday

An area of low pressure will form over the Pacific Northwest today and then drop into the Great Basin by Friday which will bring westerly winds of 20 to 40 mph with gusts to 60 mph to the wind prone mountain and desert areas each afternoon and evening. Temperatures will remain around 10 degrees above normal today, with upper 60s and 70s across the mountains and 80s to low 90s in the valleys. Temperatures will cool a few degrees Thursday, with mid 60s to mid 70s across the mountains and upper 70s and 80s in the valleys. Minimum humidity will be mainly between 12% and 25% away from the coastal areas through Thursday, but the deserts will be mainly in the single digits. Significant cooling along with a large increase in humidity will take place Friday as the low moves into the Great Basin. Temperatures will be near to a little below normal Friday through early next week as the low moves little. The marine layer will become deep by Friday morning, with morning low clouds and fog making it over the lower coastal mountain slopes. Isolated afternoon thunderstorms will form over the Sierra Crest Saturday through early next week.
